Poetical.

THE SLEET STORM.

The following gem was published in 1860. It is supposed to have been written by St. Leger L. Carter, deceased, of King George county, Va:

Awake! the sun is up, arise and sally forth;
We've had a rain of jewelry from out of the frozen North:
The earth is roped in dazzling white, each tree is hung with gems,
And diamonds, in ten thousand shapes, are hanging from their stems.

Each bush and every humble shrub with precious stones is strung,
And all the purest, brightest things, in handfuls round are flung;
The emerald, and the amethyst, the topazes behold,
And here and there a ruby red is sparkling in the cold.

The chrystallite and topaz see, and that bright sacred stone,
The holy Patmos prophet saw upon the heavenly throne;
Here all the gold of Ophir shines, with all Golconda's store,
And who could ever number up the countless myriads more?

The holly is the darkest green, with crimson fruits looks gay,
Encased in solid silver too, how rich is its display;
In green and gold the shaggy pine seems almost in a blaze
With all the sun's reflected light, yet softened to the gaze.

The cedars, ah! thou favor'd tree, in Scripture it is told,
They laid thee in the house of God and cover'd thee with gold;
But great as was King Solomon, he, nor the house he made,
Were dressed in such magnificence as thou hast here display'd.

The beach tree stands in rich array of long and shining threads,
Its brittle boughs all bending low to earth their drooping heads,
And now and then a broken limb comes from on high,
And showering down a world of gems that sparkle as they fly.

The lofty oak, the hundred-limbed branches of the trees,
Spreads out his pond'rous icy arms, loud crackling in the breeze,
And as the roused lion shakes the dewdrops from his mane,
So does the Woodland Monarch shake his crystals o'er the plain.

But time would fail to tell of all the bright and starry host,
The North wind brings to witch the world out of the realms of frost;
The meanest thing, the most deformed, the dry and sapless bough,
The bramble, and the rugged thorn are pure and spotless now.

Ye counsellors of earth come forth, ye princes who have gold,
Your diadems ye kings bring here, the jewel'd crowns ye hold,
Come woman in thy ornaments, in all their costly sheen,
And let them be the loveliest ones that ever graced a queen;

This grass that's trodden under foot, this weed with branching arms,
This glittering in the morning sun hath fifty-fold your charms;
Then cast your baubles vile away, and bend in solemn thought
To Him who hath this gorgeous scene from storm tempest wrought.

Yet this fair pageant soon must fade before the breath of noon,
And by the flat from on high your wealth will fade as soon:
Oh! lay not worthless riches up which moth and rust assail,
But those which at the Judgment Day through Christ will then avail.

What though the sun so soon must melt this frost work and its forms,
He speaks thee into life again, who rides amid the storms;
So in the twinkling of an eye, at his last trumpet dread,
Our bodies fashioned gloriously shall rise up from the dead.

The sun, goes up his destined way; how few do heed my calls!
In tears the vision melts away, the baseless fabric falls;
I too could shed some tears, alas! that this sweet scene is past,
For scene is sweet, it brings to mind which fled away as fast.

McCLURE REVIEWS THE SOUTH.

THE BLACK MAN NORTH AND SOUTH.

THE PRICELESS BENEFITS OF AN HONEST CIVIL SERVICE IN THE SOUTH—GARFIELD'S OPPORTUNITY—BOTH RACES WANT TO BE LET ALONE—THE COMING OF THE BRACKS—FACTORIES AND SCHOOLS WANTED.

A somewhat protracted journey through the South, extending from Virginia to the Gulf and thence North through the East Mississippi States to the Ohio, has been a most interesting and instructive lesson. The same ground has been traversed many times and the political, business and social aspect of the two races discussed by many intelligent observers and ready writers, but I do not recall any general investigation of the condition of the South that has not been inspired more or less by some partisan aim. Believing that the time has come when the Southern question should be considered and judged by the North from some higher standpoint than political necessity, I have diligently sought to understand the South as it is and to present its progress and prospects with the utmost candor. It is now more than fifteen years since the war closed. A new generation that had no participation in the terrible conflict has come up and filled half the places of those who witnessed the most sanguinary struggle of modern history, and those who yet survive must soon, at the latest, give place to the younger blood that is pressing in their footsteps. There is a lull in the storm of political strife. A new administration been chosen for four years; the long paralasis in business that followed the revulsion of 1873, is just disappearing under the quickened industry and renewed prosperity of all sections; the most bountiful crops have been garnered during the past few years; the unrest that disturbed employers and employed in North and South, has perished, and the nation needs only that wise government that governs least, to assure a period of unexampled growth in all the attributes of enduring wealth. The new census of the South ends all dispute in regard to the substantial advancement of the reconstructed States. Instead of being the theatres of thriftlessness and disorder, they have shamed the demagogues of both sections by the harmony of conflicting races and interests and the wonderful increase of industrial products. Free labor has more than vindicated itself, even in the experiment of the sudden emancipation and endowment of equal rights before the law of four millions of untutored bondmen, and the master who once believed that government and social order revolved around the institution of slavery, has learned that the freedom of the black race and the unity of interest that common citizenship inspires, are common blessings to whites and blacks.

THE SOUTH NEEDS AN HONEST CIVIL SERVICE.

How to restore the North and the South to the most complete and lasting harmony, is now the uppermost desire of honest men of all parties and sections. The North is now, as it has been for twenty years, entrusted with the administration of the government. It will make and administer the laws, and it can do much to hinder or advance the general prosperity of the whole country. The South is not animated by partisan hostility to the coming President. On the contrary, there is every disposition to commend and support cordially and to blame with reluctance. There is no desire to command the spoils of power, but there is an earnest and almost universal desire for peace— that peace that honest government should ever give to an honest people. The supreme want of the South is thoroughly competent and upright civil service, and that should not be thought as a favor from any faithful President. It is not only a matter of right to every section, but it is a matter of imperative duty on the part of the government. A vast preponderance of the turbulance that has disgraced the South during the last decade has been created by characterless, unscrupulous and often recklessly dishonest Federal officials. United States Judges have been appointed because of their bitter hostility to the South, who would not be charged with the administration of justice in the North. Marshals have been selected mainly for their willingness to prostitute their official power to foment sectional strife, to oppress unoffending citizens and to pollute elections.—Postmasters have been appointed who were utterly incompetent in some instances being unable to read or write, merely because they were potential in demoralizing and controlling the ignorant blacks. Custom and revenue officers have been selected to make collection of revenue secondary to the corrupt control of elections. United States Commissioners have united with District Attorneys and Marshals to plunder the government by the wanton vexation of struggling business interests in the South, and the special Agencies of the government are crowded with noted criminals as rewards for noted political crimes. In several of the Southern States I found convicts, fugatives and outlaws enjoying the patronage of the administration and inviting public contempt for government and law by their shameless distinction. This blot—not upon the South but upon the North whose administration is guilty of its creation—has lasted with more or less prominence for a dozen years, and it has been the most fruitful sources of sectional turbulence. I submit to honest and considerate Republicans of the North that it is time to end this terrible stain upon free government. I believe that General Garfield would gladly inaugurate and maintain an honest civil service in the South if it would not involve him in a conflict with his party leaders; but he knows that every leader has his henchmen preying on the government in the South who dare not be honored at home, and that the control of party power in the South, for which confliction habitually wrestles, has become merely a matter of the control of the Federal officials. There is today no Republican party in the South, solely because unscrupulous adventurers will allow no reputable man to be a Republican, and what should be a great party South as well as North, is simply a band of often wrangling official plunderers and a disgusted following of ignorant blacks. Most of the responsible federal offices could be filled by sincere Republicans who are now compelled to act against the party in State elections, and in nearly every State the colored race could furnish capable men who would be respected by all classes. Such men as Durant and Tucker, of Louisiana, Revels and Bruce, of Mississippi, and Rainey, of South Carolinia, could creditably and acceptably fill any Federal office, but they are, as a rule, driven to the rear by the aggressive jobbers and disturbers who make delegations to conventions and clamor at Washington for their rewards. Where competent Republicans can be had to fill positions in the south, they should be appointed, but where they cannot be had, neither the stranger nor the incompetent should be commissioned to disgrace Republican power. If General Garfield should take a resolute stand and enforce honest and capable civil service in the South, he will have no need to dicker over repudiation with Mahone or the new Senator from Tennessee to secure a positive administration support in the Senate. The South will not republicanize itself in Congress, but it will give a faithful support to the general policy of a just administration. With the irreconcilable interests in General Garfield's own party, it will be simply impossible for him to maintain a Republican administrative majority in either Senate or House if his important patronage shall have been dispensed, but by a reputable civil service in the South, he can defy the assaults of faction without in any degree impairing his position as a positive Republican. Is this not the wise course for the Republican President and party of the North? and is it not an imperious duty.

THE SOUTH WANTS TO BE LET ALONE.

The South has one supreme desire and that is for peace—to be let alone. And it is not merely the desire of the whites; it is as much the desire of the blacks. I have met scores of the most intelligent men in every State, and all of them out of office expressed the same wish—to be let alone. The problem of race is solved in the South and no Federal power or political device can change it. The white man will dominate without regard to the occasional numerical preponderance of the blacks, simply because superior intelligence and a domination that the memory of man runneth not to the contrary, cannot be revered without chaos. The black man has tried it, and he is conscious of his failure and of his failure to protect himself. He cannot lead, and those who most successfully lead him to appeal to his baser passions and tempt him to his own degradation and sorrow. He is not the victim of violence now, but he has waded through violence to escape from his own incompetent self-rule, and he has given up the unequal contest, not for a day or for a year, but for the present and after generations. This is the plain truth in regard to race domination in the South, as it is the plain truth of the race in the North. Here every channel of industry is open to him. The white and the black mechanic are on equal footing; the prejudices of race have no existence save when there is a struggle for domination of the spoiler over property, and he legislates and fills positions for which he is fitted not only with the sympathy but often by the voters of the whites. I saw a score of colored policemen on the streets of New Orleans, serving under a Democratic Mayor, but it would cost Mayor Stokley his last hope of election if he were to put the sable policemen on Chestnut street. I saw a black man sitting on the Democratic side of Southern Legislatures, and no Republican district in Philadelphia or Pennsylvania has ventured to nominate one of the seventy five hundred colored voters of the city, or one of the thrice that number in the State, for any legislative position, either State or municipal. I saw the colored men mingle with the Democratic organizations in the South, but not one could sit in the councils of the League or the Union Club or march in mixed ranks with Invincibles or Young Republicans in Philadelphia. I saw him have free access to every channel of mechanical industry in the South, but he is relentlessly excluded from the organized mechanical pursuits of Republican Philadelphia. His admission into the printing office of The Times or the Press or the North American would vacate every white man's case, where most of them vote the Republican Ticket to help the black man; and the colored laborer of the South, as a rule, is to-day better paid, more steadily employed and more uniformly free from want, than the farm laborer of the North or any country in the world. Indeed, so great is the demand for labor in the now rapidly progressing South, that all colored laborers are employed from January to January; their wives and children double or quadruple their income in the cotton picking season, that lasts three months in the year, and there is now a yearly winter influx of white labor from the North to aid in the sugar and rice harvests. This is the peace to the black and the white man that has followed the now accepted domination of the whites in the South, and the black man does not wish it changed for a renewal of a struggle to which he is utterly unequal. If the North must assume the task of elevating the black man to equal power regardless of fitness, let it begin by giving him in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, New York and other Republican States, the same industrial equality and political promotion that the less educated blacks of the South now enjoy with the cordial sympathy of the Southern whites. I see the same colored leader, (Ex-Senator Revels,) who was excluded from the forum of the Academy of Music, when a Republican United States Senator, solely because of his race, now at the head of a colored college that is sustained entirely by the Democratic State government of Mississippi, and he holds his high commission from the same authority, while Republican Pennsylvania has no such temple of learning for the black man. Although forbidden to speak in the Philadelphia Academy, he can speak to intelligent and appreciative white audiences in the State that is blotted by the Kemper and the Yazoo tragedies. In all the reign of passion that has followed the war of races in the South, I can find no immitation of the exclusion of a Curtis from a public hall by the Mayor of Philadelpeia. These are unpleasant contrasts to present, but between the accusers of the North and the accusers of the South, there must one day be truth, and I shall not hinder its coming.

THE FUTURE PERIL OF THE SOUTH.

The one great peril to the South for which I can see no immediate remedy is the now inevitable division of the white vote of the South and the certain appeal of contending factions to the blacks as the arbiter of disputing ambition. I have, until recently, shared the very general belief of the north that the division of the white vote of the South must be fortunate for the black voters, as it would create rivalry in extending the fullest protection to the blacks. I am now thoroughly convinced against all my wishes, that the necessary and now near division of the whites will be fruitful of great demoralization to both races and that it will be the severest trial of wisdom or universal suffrage. There is now nothing to demoralize the black man or to divert him from his industry and the education of his children. He is rapidly becoming the owner or lesee of lands and is his own farmer, and is, in many instances, accumulating wealth with habits of industry; but when the white man locks horns with his fellow in the battle of ambition, the most artful demagogues will best control the ignorant freedmen, and the degradation of both races must follow. Mahone teaches the lesson most pointedly in Virginia, where he has outstripped the Bourbons in the devices of the demagogue and has consolidated eighty thousand propertyless voters to stamp the ineffaceable stain of repudiation upon an honored Commonwealth, and repeal the just tax that opens the free schools to the colored children. The division of the whites in Georgia under the Colquitt and Norwood flags, sent a hurricane of debauchery among the colored vote of that State, and all the thriftless cupidity of ignorance has been whetted for future contests. This severe trial of universal suffrage must now come, and it will present the problem in an unexpected phase to the nation. The whites can do nothing else than divide. They cannot and they should not do otherwise. They are full of human nature; they have now no common danger to make them forget all differences of opinion and all the impulses of ambition; the repressed jealousies and longings of this people will burst out in widespread and bitter antagonism, and the black man will be the umpire between them. The seductive appeal of the agrarian and the cry of the communists will be heard by the courted black man, and his prejudices, his passions, his appetites and his indolence will be appealed to rather than his reason and his interests. I now fear this surely approaching trial of the black man as the sorest that he has yet grappled within all his many mistortunes since his liberation, and I apprehend that it will, at no distant day, demand the searching consideration of the whole nation, as did universal suffrage in Washington before it was effaced to cure its intolerable evils.

THE SOUTH NEEDS FACTORIES AND SCHOOLS.

The factory and the school must be the great civilizers of the South, and I am glad to see that Northern and Southern radicals agree in the United States Senate in nationalizing education. It is needed in the South to an extent far beyond what is generally understood in the North, and there will be no material elevation of the black race until the ignorant classes of both white and blacks can be educated. There is cordial sympathy as a rule, between the intelligent whites and the blacks, much more than there is between the whites and blacks of the North, but the ignorant white man never forgives the black man for being as intelligent as himself. In nine cases out of ten, the black man will prefer intelligent white to any sort of colored jurors, to try his case in court, and he prefers the former owner of slaves to any others, certainly because that class is certain to judge the negro most generously. All the reconstructed states have equal educational facilities for both races, but their poverty has prevented either the number of schools or the length of term which should be attained to afford proper opportunities for general schooling. The fact that the intelligent whites have no difficulty in harmonizing with the blacks, clearly points to hastened education of both races as the surest means of their mutual elevation and prosperity. And next to the school the factory is destined to be the great civilizer in the new South. Every factory I have seen looks like a green spot in the desert, and is steadily advancing every class of people about it. The negro is not successful as an oparative, as the laborer who was but lately the listless slave is incapable of the little mental concentration upon his labor that is necessary to the care of the simplest machinery; but the fields offer him abundant employment for the present, and another generation of educated blacks will take its place in the factories. The factories are now educating the poor whites, and where the factory and the school are planted together, there will be rapid improvement in both races.

MANUFAUTURERS SHOULD GO SOUTH.

The manufacturers of the North must soon go South with their cotton spindles and looms, and those who go earliest will reap the richest harvest. It is a violation of all the laws of trade to transport the cotton a thousand miles to an inhospitable climate, where water-power is unreliable a third of the year, and where it necessarily costs more to maintain labor than where the cotton is grown. Our struggling cotton factories in Pennsylvania would be earning from ten to thirty per cent. on the great water powers of the Savannah or the Alabama where labor is cheap, where the climate is the most genial to be found on the continent, and where the cotton lint can be furnished fresh

It is said that Governor Porter made Miss Stone's acquaintance during a visit to Lake Chautauqua, some time ago Subsequently he met her while she was visiting Judge Scofield, Registry of the Treasury, and Mr. Riggs, in Washington. At this time their acquaintance ripened into intimate friendship. A few months ago he met her at Cincinnati, on her way South, and they became engaged.

HARRISBURG LETTER.

Harrisburg, Jan. 18th, 1881.

"Well what do you think of things?" is the universal interrogatory here. Such a thing as an actual well organized bolt from the choice of a political caucus has not been heard of at Harrisburg for many a day and strangers of both political parties have been attracted here from all portions of the State to view the curiosity. The situation may be summed up in a few words. The friends of Galusha A. Grow's candidacy for United States Senator after frittering away all their chances for electing him by unskilful management at the outset of the contest, have succeeded in doing a wise thing in consolidating the opposition to the machine candidate into a determined little coterie of half a hundred votes which fears neither the lashings of caucus nor the personal threats of men. The two factions of the Republican party are arrayed against each other in bitter fight, with the Democracy as a balance of power quietly looking on When fifty odd Republicans refused to participate in the general Caucus of last Thursday night, the question at once was "will they stick?" and it must be admitted that some, even of the most ardent supporters of the cause espoused by the bolters were a little doubtful as to the final issue. The supporters of Oliver were outspoken in denunciation of the course pursued by the bolters and in expressions of doubt as to their sincerity and determination. Whatever doubts, however, of the present determination of the anti-machine men, which heretofore may have been entertained were dispelled by the events of to-day. When the hour of three o'clock arrived this afternoon, every Member and Senator was in his seat, and the lobbies everywhere were crowded with interested spectators. After withdrawing the names of a score or more of statesmen who had received complimentary nominations, the Houses at once proceeded to the ballot for candidates for U. S. Senator to be presented to the joint convention of the two Houses to-morrow for election. The monotonous responses of members and the counter responses of tellers were listened to by the spectators to the close with attention, when it was announced that twenty Senators, and seventy five Representatives, ninety five in all, had voted for Henry Oliver Jr Twelve Senators and forty four Representatives, fifty-six in all, had voted for Galusha A. Grow. The Democratic vote of the Senate—sixteen and of the House seventy-seven was cast solid for William A. Wallace. The scattering votes were, in the Senate, Senator Parker of Schuylkill voted for Daniel Agnew, and in the House, Mr. Law of Philadelphia voted for Wayne MacVeagh, Mr. Ruddiman, of Philadelphia for B. Harrison Brewster and Mr. Welsh of Schuylkill for Carey Beard. Thus were the lines drawn, and both Houses adjourned until to-morrow and speculation again became rife as to the out-come of the future. The general impression now is that the bolters will stand firm and if Oliver is to be elected at all must be by Democratic votes. That this will be accomplished it is said that the friends of Oliver are confident, but I am unable to find any Democrat excepting those who are here employed as workers for the machine, who will agree that it is at all possible for the Democrats to vote for Oliver, and do anything but a foolish thing. It is not at all likely that any definite result will be reached in the joint convention to-morrow, for the indications are positive that the Democrats whatever final disposition they may make of their votes will adhere to their caucus nominee for some days at least unless a compromise between the contending Republican factions shall sooner elect Hoyt or some like compromise candidate.

Your readers may expect to hear of no work until this business of United States Senator is out of the way, for although the Senate Committees will be announced, shortly, it does not seem that the Speaker of the House will announce the Committees of that body until "the bone of contention" is carried away.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

Washington, D. C. January 18th, 1881.

After dangerous delays Mr. Cox yesterday presented to the House his re-apportionment bill. Notwithstanding the time lost—the bill was expected to be ready December 21st—there is a fair prospect of its passage unless the Republicans debate it lengthily in order to bring around on extra session. There are indications that many of the more Radical of them desire such a session. The bill as reported provides for 301 Representatives as follows.

Alabama 8; Arkansas 5; California 3. Colorado 1; Connecticut 4; Delaware 1; Florida 1 Georgia, 9; Illinois, 19; Indiana, 12; Iowa, 10; Kansas, 6; Kentucky, 10; Louisiana, 6; Maine, 4; Maryland, 6; Massachusetts, 10 Michigan, 10; Minnesota, 5; Mississippi, 7, Missouri, 13; Nebraska, 3; Nevada, 1; New Hampshire, 2; New Jersey, 7; New York, 31; North Carolina, 8; Ohio, 19; Oregon, 1; Pennsylvania, 26; Rhode Island, 2; South Carolina, 6; Tennessee, 9; Texas, 10; Vermont, 2; Virginia, 9; West Virginia, 4; Wisconsin, 9;

Yesterday, too, saw the beginning of the end of the Kellogg Senatorial case. This Kellogg was sent up here by the radicals of Louisiana as Senator. His case was inquired into and debated, and he was seated by a formal vote of the Senate. Since that vote, Messrs. Thurman, Bayard, McDonald and three or four other Democrats have uniformly held that the case was finally settled. Senator Hill and other Democrats have held the contrary, and yesterday called the case up. The Democratic Senators who voted against taking it up were Butler, Davis, of Illinois, Bayard, Whyte, Williams, Thurman, Voorhees, Pendleton and Lamar. All these men will vote in the same way whenever the case is sought to be brought before the Senate, and they are sufficient in number to prevent its consideration.

The House is again lost in its consideration of the funding bill. Speaker Randall last week appeared in the lead for two days and progress was made, but members of the House, seemed to think, upon reflection, that the progress was taking them further in the woods, and they have been struggling since as before, without a guide. The Senate is preparing to consider the subject in a more orderly, if not a more intelligent manner. Republican Senators have had a caucus to secure united action. They will almost unanimously agree upon a three and one-half per cent bond, redeemable in five, and payable in twenty years. And to this complexion will the measure come at last, I think.

There are further and conclusive assurances of Senator Blaine's acceptance of the State Department in the new Cabinet. One of those innumerable young men who are worshippers of the Maine Senator, told me yesterday that the position would materially aid his Presidential prospects, inasmuch as though the appointment might at first intensify the enmity of a few persons against him, it would put him where no new enemies would be made.

HILTON.

The Remarkable Activity in Railroad Building

Last year was the most remarkable in the history of the American railway business. The earnings of the roads were much greater than ever before; nearly all the lines west of the Mississippi River were brought together under connected systems; while the increase in the mileage was larger than in any previous year except 1872. Then our excessive railway construction was followed by the financial crash of 1873, from which it took the country years to recover.

The Financial Chroniele published at the beginning of December a table of the gross earnings of forty three railroads for the eleven months of 1880, compared with those for the corresponding period of 1879. The figures for 1880 were $180,660,789, against $143,840,029 for 1879; a gain of $36,820,660, or nearly one quarter.

In 1879 the business of railroad construction, which since 1872 has received a serious check, showed great comparative activity. The total number of miles of roads built reached 4,721, or more than double the average of the previous five years.

It was this increase of railroad building, accompanied by a vast augmentation of traffic owing to the great harvest, that revived the drooping spirits of the iron manufacturers. Besides the rails needed for the mileage added, repairs were everywhere necessary to meet the accumulating business. Our production of pig iron was accordingly greater than that of the year before by about half a million tons; and it found a market at largely increased prices The production even exceeded that of 1873, the previous year of largest supply, by nearly a quarter of a million of tons. We manufactured of iron and steel rails nearly the same amount in excess of the production of 1872, the year when railroad building became almost a mania. Their importation, which had dropped off altogether in 1878, rose to 60,000 tons, while of all kinds of iron and steel we imported about half a million tons, against about a fifth of that amount in 1878.

But the activity in railroad building in 1879 was far exceeded by that of last year. The addition to the railway mileage of the United States for 1880 was, according to a table compiled by the Railway Age, 7,207 miles; an increase over 1879 of 2,486 miles. The number of miles added in 1872 was about the same, 7,340.

The effect of this increase on the iron trade was of course very marked. The production of pig iron rose from about two and three quarter millions in 1879 to between three and a quarter and three and a half millions in 1880; and our importation of pig iron was about 700,000 tons. We produced 1,2000,000 tons of rails, and imported about 275,000 tons. The new roads took about a million tons of iron and steel, and there was besides an enormous consumption for repairs to the roads and rolling stock of the lines already existing. As a consequence, the iron trade has had the busiest year it has ever known.

Of the 7,207 miles of railroad built in 1880 more than one half, or 3,868 miles, were laid in the States and Territories west of the Mississippi. The rapidity with which railroad construction is going on in that portion of the Union presages a still greater increase in its population during the next ten years than the census shows for the last decade. Already in the region west of the Mississippi considerably more than a fifth of the population of the country is gathered whereas in 1860 the proportion was only about a tenth.

The promise is that railroad construction during the present year will be even larger than that for 1880.—N. Y. Sun.

Coal Oil Suicides.

Another victim of coal oil ignorance on Saturday night, a young married woman who probably could read and write. It does seem, after this, that all coal oil cans or all coal oil lamps should have some kind of tag, with a label, 'Don't fill me at night!' that would remind careless people of the horrible risks they run. Even when the light is out there may be a charred end of the wick hot enough to set fire to the vapor of kerosene. One of the most terrible accidents in this city to a lovely young girl was caused by pouring alcohol from a demijohn into the little heating lamp under a coffee urn. The lamp was cut, but the wick was not cold, and so a terrible explosion occurred, wrapping the young lady in flames from the burning alcohol, and seriously endangered her life. If it had been kerosene there would have been no escape, as this oil is so much more penetrating than alcohol, and burns with a hotter flame. There are people who still fill their lamps at night, by a hot stove, or near another. These should read all the details of the coal oil lamp suicide in New Jersey on Friday night. It was not only suicide, but infanticide, for a little child was burned to death also, It would be a good thing to give public school children some lectures on coal oil—not in chemistry books, but by such bits of newspaper reading for a text, and by showing the properties of common kerosene to be even worse than gunpowder, which has no vapor, and neither runs nor spreads.—Philadelphia Ledger.

A NEW PAYING OCCUPATION
—FOR—
LADIES & GENTLEMEN

The Hand-some Nickel Plated New Home Lamp being introduced to the public this season, is the most meritorious article ever offered agents to make money with, is safer and more convenient than the student lamp, which has heretofore had the reputation of being the safest lamp made, it has a clamp to attach it to the sewing machine, piano, organ, desk, etc. The fear of the ordinary lamp being accidentally upset or thrown in the table, is entirely relieved by the simple clamp contrivance. It can be adjusted to throw the light just where it is wanted to suit the eyes, and can be converted into a hand-some wall lamp. It has the best argand burner, a filling indicator, and convenient match box, and its price is within the reach of every one. It has been fully tested and daily orders from the Western Christian Advocate, Am. Christian Review, Herald and Presbyter, Journal and Messenger, and Christian Standard, the leading religious papers of Cincinnati, and is endorsed by the Mayor and Postmaster of Cincinnati, the agent of the American express company and hundreds of insurance companies, as being the safest, most convenient and best lamp made.

There are three weeks why agents should seek such an article to canvass for—first for its absolute safety and great convenience, it is needed in every home—second its low price makes its sale immense—third it will be a great credit to handle such an article. One southern agent writes, it sells faster than Gen. Lee's portrait sold right after the war, another writes, it beats the palmy days of the sewing machine, its rapid sale, low price, and liberal terms surprise all agents Address Home Lamp Co, Cincinnati, O., mentioning this paper and they will give you full particulars and exclusive territory to canvass in. nov.5-13w

W. H Gotwald, of Milton, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. Mr. Adams. A large number of friends were in attendance, and were shown to seats by the ushers, Messrs G. B. Reimensnyder, of Sunbury, George Bertsch, of Mauch Chunk, C. B. Kline, of Williamsport, and Chas. M. Bittenbender, brother of the groom. Promptly at the appointed time, 9.45, the wedding party reached the church and marched up the centre aisle, the ushers leading, followed by Miss Eliza Kuhn, sister of the bride, on the arm of Philip V. Weaver, Esq., of Hazleton, the bride and groom coming last. The clergymen met them at the chancel rail, where the impressive ceremony was performed. Prof. I. W. Niles presided at the organ and discoursed sweet music, playing softly during the ceremony with fine effect, and closing with the grand old wedding march as the party left the church. The bride was attired in a handsome traveling suit. The families of the contracting parties and a few friends repaired to the residence of the bride's parents, where a bounteous dinner awaited them, to which full justice was done. Among those present were the Misses Eckrote and Miss Keller of Mifflin, Mrs. Adams, and Miss Sterner of Pottsville. The bride received many handsome and useful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Bittenbender left on the noon train on the D. L. & W. road, and will visit Niagara falls and other points of interest. The best wishes of their many friends follow them on their bridal tour, and on their journey of married life.

At a Council meeting of St. Matthew's Evangelical Lutheran church, Bloomsburg, Pa., the following resolutions were passed on the death of Rev. O. D. S. Marcley:

WHEREAS, Our Heavenly Father, by an inscrutable, but all wise providence, has removed our brother Rev. O. D. S. Marcley, from the midst of the conflicts of the church militant to the honors and glory of the church triumphant,

Resolved. That in the death of brother O. D. S. Marcley, our church has sustained the loss of one, who, by nearly three years of earnest labor among us, proved himself a devoted, efficient and beloved pastor.

Resolved, That in the death of our Pastor, whose warm heart and fertile mind were ever devising liberal things for the glory of God and our beloved Zion, the Evangelical Lutheran church, has lost a well known and honored minister.

Resolved, That we tender to the sorely afflicted family our sincere sympathy and pray Him who is the husband of the widow and the father of the orphan to be especially near to them in their sad bereavement, and we further Resolve, That an engrossed copy of these resolutions be presented to the family and that they be furnished to the local and church papers for publication.

John B. Mears, brother of Geo. W. Mears, was in town last week. He is residing at Chicago, and was on his way to Washington D. C. on business. This is his first visit here in several years.

On Tuesday John Daily brought over a large shaft for the Irondale water wheel, from Mountour county. It was 28 feet long and about 4 feet in diameter and took six horses to convey it.

Fortunately young men when too poor to hire a livery to take their girls out riding have left another resort. They can borrow a hand sled and take her "coasting." 'Tis only an expression of good will the girl desires any way.

We were greatly amused the other day at the plan adopted by a man who desired to get a crowd of boys off his sled He addressed them as follows: "Boys, perhaps if you knew what ailed me, you would not wish to ride with me I think I'm getting the small pox and am hurrying home." That was enough, the boys scattered in every direction.

Two large sleighing parties from Danville, one composed of women only, the other of males and females, visited this place on Saturday evening last. The former were entertained at the Central in the usual excellent style of mine host Brown. The latter, having brought their own music, occupied Brower's Hall, and apparently enjoyed themselves hugely with dancing and other festivities. Of all our sister towns, Danville furnishes by far the jolliest parties.

It will be interesting news to the many friends of Miss Alice L. Thomas, in this community, to learn that on the 13th of January, 1881, at the residence of H. M. Wier, Cambridge, Illinois, the marriage of Miss Alice to C. Edmund Worthington, of said place, was consummated. We have been favored with an elegantly printed announcement of the ceremony and that hereafter the home of the happy pair will be Topeka, Kansas. "May they live long and prosper."

MESSRS. EDITORS:—On his return from the funeral of his brother, the late and much lamented pastor of the Lutheran Church of your town, Mr. Irvin Marcley informed me that you desired a brief article for your paper relating to the deceased, involving such facts as may be of interest to the public generally. I am too much occupied at present to furnish anything of an elaborate character, but have already promised to contribute something to the memory of my much esteemed friend for the columns of the Lutheran Observer, which when it appears I shall take pleasure in placing at your disposal. Meanwhile, in addition to what is said in your issue of the 14th inst., containing a notice of his death, I send the following items which perhaps you will deem of sufficient importance to give a place in your next number:

The parents of our departed friend are still living where their beloved son was born, and where his early days were spent. They are aged and infirm, and, of course, the sorrowful tidings of his sudden death was to them, as well as to the large circle of his more distant relatives and friends, painfully afflict ve.

The first developments of Mr. Marclay's educational course are quite suggestively indicated by the fact that when he was but about sixteen years of age he engaged in school teaching, and in communities not remote from home. He taught for three successive winter terms. He made acquaintances then who still remember him in that capacity with fresh and respectful interest.

It was perhaps in his nineteenth year that this attention was turned to higher school advantage, and he soon became a student at Hartwick Seminary where he completed his academic studies. From here he went to Union College, but what class he entered, and how long he remained, I have now no means of determining. His standing, however, may be inferred from the fact that his class placed him at their head; as also that this venerable institution conferred on him some year or two since the title of Master of Arts.

It was either while in College, or soon after he left, that he made a public profession of his faith in Christ and united with the Lutheran church of Gardnersville, of which the much esteemed Rev. P. Weiting was then pastor. Whether at that time he had decided to turn his attention to the ministry, I do not certainly know, but not long after he commenced his theological studies at Selinsgrove, Pa., where he made the acquaintance of the lady who subsequently became his wife, of whose personal worth and present affections, the citizens of Bloomsburg need no testimonials.

My acquaintance with Mr. Marclay commenced when he became an applicant for license of the Synod of which I was a member This was during the month of June, 1867. At the next session of the same body he was ordained. Both his examinations are very distinctly remembered, not only because they were satisfactory, but because in all his bearings he invited, rather than deprecated, scrutiny.

His ministerial labors in his native State, were devoted to Freybush, in Mont. county, and Orleans in Jefferson county. Both were country charges and called for a great deal of hard work, as appointments were numerous and at distant points from each other. He sustained himself well and was successful, especially in the latter field, in which he was favored with several more or less extensive revivals. From here he went to Ashland, Pa., where for several years he labored efficiently and most acceptably, as all with you know.

Respecting the balance of his ministerial career, the citizens of Bloomsburg need no information. Devoted as Mr. Marclay was to his own church, in no location could his acquaintance and appreciation be long limited to it. He was sure to make himself known, not so much by seeking prominence as by meriting it.

Mr. Marclay's name still stands as a member on the records of the church to which the writer now ministers, and on the evening of the 23rd inst., a memorial service will be held in which several surrounding pastors, who knew him well, will be heard upon topics suitable to the occasion.

His deeply bereaved family and church in your midst, have the sympathy of many warm hearts here.

OBITUARY.

REV. O. D. S MARCLEY.

Rev. O D. S. Marcley was born March the 11th, 1840, in the town of Seward, Schoharie county, New York His ancestors were of German origin. His parents, who are still living, are christian people, and at an early age he consecrated his life to the service of Christ. In 1858 or 1859 he was confirmed a member of the Evangelical Lutheran church, at Gardnersville, New York, of which church he was a member at the time of his death. He began his studies as a student in the Seminary at Charlottesville, N. Y., but he became impressed with the evidence that God called him to preach, and he left this institution and entered Hartwick Seminary with a view of preparing for the Lutheran ministry. He remained in this institution for about two years, when he entered the Freshman class of Union College, New York Before he had completed his course at this college, he went to Selinsgrove, Pa., and pursued the theological course of the Missionary Institute at that place. About the 1st of April, 1867, while yet a student at Selinsgrove, he received a call from the churches at Freysbush and Starkville, New York, which call he accepted and went to his field of labor. The Franckean Synod in June, 1867, licensed him to preach and in the following year at Fordsborough in Minden, New York, he was ordained as minister of the Gospel by the same Synod. On the thirty-first day of October, 1867, he was married to Miss Millie Carey, of Selinsgrove, who survives him with a daughter and two sons. His ministry at Freysbush, was attended with much success in the building up of the spiritual conditions of the church. A beautiful parsonage was erected and paid for, which was the product of his efficient labor, zeal and activity.

In 1869 he received a call from Jefferson charge in Jefferson county, New York, which he accepted and continued in this charge until October 31, 1869. Here he also did good work in the cause of Christ in adding many to the church and rebuilding of churches. In New York he was highly esteemed and held many honored and trusted positions in the church to which he belonged; being the Secretary of the Synod, Member of the Examining Committee and Chairman of the Delegation to the General Synod.

In August, 1875, he received a call from the Ashland congregation in Pennsylvania, which he accepted and remained there until the first of March, 1878. Of his work in this place, we will speak from the records of the church made by himself:—

"During the winter 1876 I organized the Lutheran congregation of Gordon with thirty-three members. At the following communion some forty-six members were added. We purchased the church building from the Presbyterians for $600 In Ashland during the year 1876 about $2 700 of near $4.000 church debt was raised and paid. The following is among other records of labor: Additions to membership, ninety-four; seventy-nine at Gordon and thirty-two at Mt Carmel, in all two hundred and five. Marriages, twenty; baptisms, seventy one Mt. Carmel was served only one year, during 1877 to the close of pastorate in Ashland. The salary on my first coming to Ashland was $900, and at the close of the pastorate with the additions of Gordon and Mt. Carmel it was $1200."

O. D. S. MARCLEY,
Pastor.

He preached his trial sermon in Bloomsburg on Sunday, February 3, 1878, and on the 11th day of the same month he received a call from the Evangelical Lutheran church and began his labors on the tenth day of March of the same year as the successor of Dr. John McCron, one of the ablest pulpit orators in the Lutheran church in Pennsylvania. Mr. Marcley entered upon his work in this new field, feeling the responsibility of the great work before him; having been preceded by a prominent a man in the church as Dr. McCron, he determined to use every effort to make his ministry in this place successful. He began his pastorate work at once, visiting all of the congregation, including those who were not members of the church. His preaching drew large audiences and by an acceptable and forcible way of presenting God's truth, his work was steadily increasing the interest in the church. His good work for this community was not confined to the church of which he was pastor, but he was active in all worthy good christian work which led to the purification of a community, among them was that of the temperance cause in which he took a very active part; not in an aggressive but in a persuasive way, seeking to show the intemperate that their ways were against good morality and christianity, and by gentle argument urged them to reform.

He was a man of such intellectual ability, that the degree of A. M. was conferred upon him by Union College in 1879 at which time President Potter expressed himself that he was a man of great mental and moral attainments.

Mr. Marcley was of a kind and genial disposition, courteous to all whom he met, of a tender and compassionate heart, ever ready to do any one a kindness or a favor, and from his good qualities had many friends in this community for the short time that he resided here, as was shown by the large concourse of people that attended his funeral, and the fact that the business places of the town were closed during the burial. His funeral was attended by the clergy of all the denominations of the town and many members of the Susquehanna Synod, of which he was a member, took part in the services.

Much of Mr. Marcley's success in the ministry may be attributed to the encouragement that he received from his christian companion who by her constant participation in his work and ir stimulating his energies, and in making his home pleasant and agreeable, ever sharing with him his trials and troubles, helped to sustain him in his labors.

ABOUT STOVES.

It is now about 7 years since we began selling Stoves. During all this time we have strictly adhered to our first determination, and that was to accept no consignments from any manufacturer, but have carefully examined the products of the different manufacturers and selected for cash such Stoves as our judgment and experience warranted to suit our trade. Handsome designs, durability and economy of fuel being our main stand points, this effort on our part, we are happy to say has not been unappreciated by the public; our trade has been rapidly increasing, our sales this season being double that of last. It is no object for us to sell a poor stove just for the mere profit at the time. A poor stove spoils the sale of others just the same as a good one makes many sales. We know very well when we send out one of our handsome Ranges and your next door neighbor hears you speak of its many superior qualities over the old cook stove, she will have one too, or worry somebody; and so of the Parlor Stoves and Heaters. We have at all times a good line of Stoves and Ranges on our floor and invite a critical examination before purchasing elsewhere. We furnish to order repairs for all kinds of stoves. We deliver and set up within reasonable distance of town all stoves bought of us.

AN INTERESTING SKETCH OF THE GREAT AGITATOR.

The London World has the following: 'Since I forsook agriculture for politics,' said Mr. Parnell, 'I have not slept six nights in Avondale house.' The chief agitator's country seat is an unpretending residence situated on the slope of the Wicklow mountains, with a beautiful view of the forest, river and dale from the windows of the living rooms. It has a rather barren and neglected look, its whitewashed exterior harmonizing but ill with the tints of the meadow lands stretching in a semicircle, bounded by lofty trees, in front of the house. The house was built by Mr. Parnell's grandfather, and on the lock of the entrance door the date 1799 is inscribed. On crossing the threshold the visitor finds himself in a square hall of moderate dimensions, along the side of which runs a gallery overhead, leading to the sleeping apartments. The most conspicuous object in the hall is a billiard table, across the slates of which no ball has, judging from appearances, rattled for generations. The walls are decorated with the horns of the ancient Irish elk, with hunting spears and other implements of warfare and chase. A log fire burns on a spacious open hearth. As the visitor stands examining the place, an aged dame floats out of a side apartment, and, expresses surprise at the visit, asks 'Master Charles if he wishes that she should provide breakfast.' The master gives the nod and then requests the guests to step around the house with him. Mr. Parnell is a man of singular mind and gracious manners in private life but one's eyes are constantly directed to the cold and bloodless face in the endeavor to reconcile the frigid exterior with the courtesy of the lips.

The parlor of the Avondale House is neither homely or cheerful, and the atmosphere of the room is that of the Laureate's forsaken dwelling. One could fancy that the coverings had just been drawn off the furniture at the expiration of a chancery suit. The pictures are expressionless, and of no great merit; but there is a richly enamled fire place, the work of an Italian artist, whose method of execution, Mr. Parnell thinks has become a lost art. The marble of this chief-d' œuvre is inlaid in colored earths, delicately shaded and twisted in fantastic festoons of flowers. A volume of Carlyle's "Micellanies" lies on a small table beside the fire, but the presence of this symbol of life is accounted for by the fact that one of Mr. Parnell's sisters from accross the Atlantic has been residing for some months under her brother's roof. The drawing room has been painted and ornamented by the same Italian artist spoken of above, the chief feature of the work being a number of cleverly-wrought medallions containing sea-views. Various blue books are scattered about the apartment, having reference principally to Irish matters, such as fisheries and agricultural returns.

The library of Avondale House is a handsome square room, bookshelves occupying every side. There are many old calf-bound editions of the classics, and a comprehensive collection of all the English authors of note from Piers' Plowman downward. "An ancestor of yours has been immortalized by Dr. Johnson, I believe?" remarked a guest, taking down a volume of the Lives of the Poets. "He belonged to a branch of the Parnell family, but is not a relative in the direct line," was the reply. Mr. Parnell is no great reader. The only books of recent date, or of apparent recent issue, to be seen were a few novels and about a dozen volumes relating to Ireland, such as the Irish in America, and some histories of the country. "When I have any leisure I employ my time in working out new mechanical contrivances," said Mr. Parnell: "and in helping to fit in its place the water-wheel of my saw-mill, I nearly had this finger cut off," lifting up a much sacrificed finger. In the corner of the library is a collection of old volunteer banners, belonging to the Wicklow volunteers before the '98 rebellion. These are somewhat torn and disfigured, but the first land leaguer takes much pride ir them, since they belonged to his great grandfather, who was colonel of the regiment. One of these ensigns bears the following inscription: "Independent Wicklow," with the motto, "Velox et acer et fidelis amicis," and an Irish wolf-dog for crest.

Above Avondale House, and beyond the ampitheatre of trees, is a clear level space which has been used by Mr. Parnell's father as a cricket ground. "My father was once the captain of the Eton eleven," observed Mr. Parnell, "and I was always very fond of cricket myself before I took to politics. From this spot a view of several of the battlefields of the rebellion is obtained, with a magnificent sight of the Kerry mountains and the waters meeting in the vale of Avoca.

Mr. Parnell is very abstemious, drinking little but water and tea. He smokes a great deal, and is never in want of a good "weed," which he proffers very liberally to his friends. At the same time he keeps a neat little wine cellar, and can, when the occasion arises, regale his guests with a choice vintage. In other respects his style of living is very comely. His only retainers are the venerable matron we have seen, and a man who looks after his horse, the garden, and the general affairs of the house. In the intervals of agitation he is a great rider, a moderately keen sportsman, something of a farmer, and often speaks of himself as a Cincinnatus who has been regretfully compelled to relinquish his cabbages. Mr. Parnell has always been a more or less solitary man, seeing little company, and leading rather an introspective life. He has plans and objects beyond those which he has yet unfolded; but he has no objection to enter fully into a discussion of the merits of his case. It is noticeable that he is ready to catch up quickly and assimilate to his purposes any fact, idea or phrase that may be casually dropped in conversation or mention in newspapers.

Prejudice Kills.

'Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery under the care of several of the best (and some of the worst) physicians, who gave her disease various names but no relief, and now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had poohed at for two years, before using it. We earnestly hope and pray that no one else will let their sick suffer as we did, on account of prejudice against so good a medicine as Hop Bitters.'—The Parents.—Telegram.

A boy having complained to his father that Bill had thrown the Bible and hurt him on the head, the father replied: "Well, you are the only member of the family on whom the Bible ever had the least impression.

Living Witnesses

The hundreds of strong, hearty, and rugged and healthy looking men, women and children that have been rescued from beds of pain, sickness and well nigh death by Parker's Ginger Tonic are the best evidences in the world of its sterling merit and worth. You will find such in almost every community. Read of it in another column.

How Chickens get out of Shells.

Take the egg out of a nest on which a hen has had her full time, carefully holding it to the ear; turning it around, you will find the exact spot which the little fellow is picking on the outside of the shell; this he will do until the inside shell is perforated, and then the shell is forced outward as a small scale, leaving a hole. Now if you will take one of the eggs in this condition from under the hen, remove it to the house or other suitable place, put it in a box or nest, keeping it warm and moist, as near the temperature of the hen as possible (which may be done by lying it between two bottles of warm watter upon some cotton or wool,) and lay a glass over the box or nest, then you can sit or stand, as is most convenient, and witness the true modus operandi. Now watch the little fellow work his way into the world and you will be amused and instructed as I have often been. After he has got his opening he commences a nibling motion with the point of the upper bill on the outside of the shell, always working to the right (if you have the large end of the egg from you and the hole upward) until he has worked his way almost around, say within half an inch in a perfect circle, he then forces the cap or butt end of the shell off, and then has a chance to streighten his neck, thereby loosening his legs somewhat, and so, by their help, forcing the body from the shell.—[American Farm Journal.

I am cured of catarrh and deafness, and after giving Ely's Cream Balm a thorough trial. It has on several occasions relieved me of severe cold in the head. My aunt was troubled with deafness so that she could not hear at all in one ear. After using the Balm a few times her hearing was restored. F. D. More, Insurance Broker, Elizabeth, N. J. See advertisement.

For the treatment of catarrh, cold in the head, catarrhal deafness and hay fever we call your attention to a new and particular remedy, Ely's Cream Balm. We are continually hearing the most favorable reports of its curative effects. It is easy and agreeable to apply. We would strongly recommend this discovery to our patrons and every one suffering from catarrh, etc., being fully convinced it will please in every case. Vanriper & Co., druggists, Passaic N. J.

A couple arrived at San Francisco on their bridal tour, and took a room at a hotel. The bridegroom then informed the bride that he was out of money, and did not know how to get any. He said that the best thing for them to do was to commit suicide. She agreed, and suggested laudanum of which she had a bottle. They divided this drug into two equal parts, and swallowed it. The man died, but the dose proved insufficient to kill the woman, and she recovered.

Two girls who recently ran away from Long Island, are thus graphically described by their father: "Laura, aged 18, dressed in a straw hat; Florence J., age 16, blue suit." We tremble in view of the possibility of the fair Laura's hat blowing off.

"Doctor, my daughter seems to be going blind and she's just getting ready for her wedding, too! Oh, dear me, what's to be done?" "Let her go right on with the wedding, madam, by all means. If anything can open her eyes marriage will."

Five years ago over 6,000,000 croquets sets were sold in this country. This accounts for the number of old maids and batchelors left to mourn alone. Croquet will rise a rumpus quicker'n a political discussion.
